Engineers

THIRTY thousand Americans making a card index survey of the industry so that it may be prepared in defending the country.

The past eighteen months have seen America what lack of industrial products some of the countries now at war had the ships and they had the means struck, their factories were not able with arms and shells and powder.

And our factories are not prepared. And our factories are not prepared. And our factories are not prepared.

Engineering Societies—Civil, Mining and Mechanical Engineers have pledged their services to the industry for the national defense.

The President has urged the engineers, and asks that the better national insurance agencies have offered their services to the United States, in close cooperation.

The President has issued a statement, published without radio-wide series to call the attention of the public to the fact that the industry is not prepared to meet the emergency.
